Logistics firm saves time and money by renting bespoke software

Rugby-based transport company Exact Logistics was finding it hard to cope with a deluge of faxes and emails from its growing international customer base.

Needing a piece of software that would allow staff to co-ordinate the information, Managing Director Adam Shuter turned to fellow Rugby-based company Karus Systems, providers of the new RentUrApp™ platform.

The platform allows businesses to commission bespoke software development without the burden of upfront costs. In this case, the solution was PalSist™.

Adam said: "A lot of our customers are based in Germany and the whole point of is to serve those customers. They send information to us in all sorts of different forms; some send faxes, some send emails, some send nothing at all.

"We needed to have a way of being able to coordinate and collect that information, check delivery addresses and then enter it into our operating system. That's why we rent PalSist™."
